The latter is the celebrated mulatto soil for wl Southwest Missouri is particularly noted, and is so highly prized wb ever known. The soils are underlaid with what is known as the red belt, taining the porous hornstone, rich in oxide of iron, oxide of calcium, phosphorus and animal and vegetable deposits, which together act o- the soil as perpetual fertilizers. This red subsoil, broughtrom a depth of twenty or thirty feet, will sprout vegetation like a hot bed. The soils of Jasper county are noted as favorable to the production of every staple grown in the Northern States, as well as some of the; leading productions of the Southern States, such as cotton, peanuts, barley, hemp, flax, castor beans and field peas. me...
