Createspace, United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 228 x 154 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Take the journey! This is a masterly scripted novel relating to all the political ills, still infesting this world today, told from a woman s point of view - and nothing less! A Nation to Ruin is based on a true story by the author, Navy Ung-Lancaster. She is one of many who barely survived Cambodian genocide - yet one of a few remaining able to properly recount the actions and real intent behind the founders of the first Cambodian Republic back in 1970. The first half of the story stems from her direct association with her father s influential friends and political colleagues - ministers and generals within the government - during important family outings and secluded meetings from 1969 to 1975, to which she was present. Navy s tale begins - told through the eyes of a cute ten year old - slightly precocious girl and continues on through her puberty into adolescence. Her eye for detail is apparent from the start. The entire narrative is a total account - once and for all exposing the promises - deceptions and actions taken by an array of important political leaders, including all the military factors effecting the period, such as: King Norodom Sihanouk, his cousin, Prince Sisowath Sirik Matak, Prime Minister Lon Nol, Chairman Mao, President Nixon, National Security Advisor Kissinger, the CIA - the U.S. Military s long failed attempts in Vietnam - the NVA - the virtuous Red Cross - the ineptitude of the U.N. - the reckless B52 bombings that led to the rise of the red Chinese backed deviationist, Pol Pot and his dreaded Khmer Rouge, including the bloody genocide that followed. Her...
