Excerpt: . has furnished us, and which are but too frequently allowed to lie dormant, and consequently remain incapable of contributing their intended share towards the establishment and maintenance of our general health, and to the performance of the tasks allotted to them with ease and dexterity. The force of the truth of W187!-S sana in cm-pore mno had its due weight with the ancients, with whom it was a subject of eat national im rtance. The education of the Grecian youth wou d have been consiggrd by them very defective without this important feature. The result was, that, in that country, the finest, the healthiest, and the most vi orbus forms of the human frame were displayed. In contemplating t ese forms which have been transmitted to us through those noble productions of statuary which the modems have hitherto failed to equal, we must confess the justice of the sentence which pronounces us it de generate race. Within these few years past, however, considerable progress has been made in Germany and Denmark towards reviving so essential a part of the art of education, and we have every reason to hope that the praise- worthy effects of this important popular institution, will extend their beneficial influence over every part of the civilized globe. Through the exertions of such men as Salzmann, Gutsmuth, and Jahn, the revival of legitimate gymnastic exercises has acquired very great popularity in Germany, and the youths who attend the gymnastic establishments...
